Holland, MI —

It's a little out of the regular meeting schedule of the Alliance for Cultural and Ethnic Harmony, but on Friday, ACEH members and community friends will have an opportunity to hear from international students at Hope College.

The meeting, which starts at 7 p.m., will be held in the rotunda of the Martha Miller Center on campus, located at 10th Street and Columbia Avenue. The public is invited. In the program, "The World Studies at Hope," international students will share their perspectives on global education and studying in the United States.

Amy Otis-De Grau, director of the Fried International Center at the college, said the gathering will be an opportunity for people to meet and greet students from a variety of countries. Local residents can become host families for students while they are at Hope, providing hospitality from time to time and develop friendships .

Twenty-eight foreign countries are represented in this year's student body of 3,200: Afghanistan, Armenia, Australia, Brazil, China, Ethiopia, France, Germany, Ghana, India, Japan, Kenya, Korea, Mexico, Myanmar, Netherlands, Nigeria, Serbia, Sierra Leone, Singapore, South Africa, Sweden, Taiwan, Uganda, United Kingdom, Venezuela, Vietnam and West Bank.
